Found by UConn geologists

Connecticut gold high in concentration

STORRS (AP)—Rock samples found last year by UConn geologists have gold concentrations 100 times greater than those found in typical North American gold mines, it was reported Thursday.

The U.S. Geological Survey found the three samples had gold concentrations of 1.5 ounces per ton, 3 ounces per ton and six ounces per ton said Geology Professor, Anthony Philpotts.

He said concentrations of gold in North American mines are assayed in hundredths of ounces per ton. The richest find of gold in Europe in the 20th Century was found last year in Northern Ireland, and the concentrations there were 0.5 ounces per ton, Philpotts said.

The gold was discovered by accident in May 1985 while UConn geologists searched for cobalt in the Meshomasic State Forest in Cobalt. Stories of gold in the region have persisted since Colonial times, but last year's discovery was the first documented gold find in Connecticut history.

"These are very rich gold ores," Philpotts said Thursday when contacted at his office here. He said further tests would have to be conducted to determine how much gold there might be in the area.

"We have the assay showing there are high concentrations of gold in the area. The next question that has to be answered is how extensive are the veins in which this gold occurs," he said.

The professor said a student will make a geophysical survey of the area this summer, but that it might require a company to mine the area to accurately determine how much gold exists.

State geologist Sidney Quarrier was surprised to learn of the high concentrations. He said the formation in which the gold was found extends far north into Massachusetts and other New England states.

Stan House, a forester with the Department of Environmental Protection, said he doubted the state would allow any mining in the forest to determine the extent of the gold. He said such a decision would have to be made by DEP Commissioner Stanley J. Pac.

Athletic task force subcommittee hears UConn's athletes' problems

By Janet Ryan
Campus Correspondent

A subcommittee of the recently established Athletic Task Force met Tuesday night to discuss problems student athletes face here at UConn.

Problems such as room draw procedure and a lack of medical facilities at athletic events were among major issues discussed at the meeting.

The committee told the students that their job was to listen to the student athlete's problems complaints and concerns and to make recommendations as to the necessary action to be taken in order to alleviate the problem.

Matt Addington, of the men's soccer team, discussed problems he had with the room-draw procedure at UConn. For two consecutive years, Addington has attended campus-wide room-draws and has been forced to live in a triple.

Another student, said she was placed in Buckley dormitory because that was the only housing available. Because of this, she said, it was an inconvenient distance to get to the field house.

One recommendation made to the athletes was to offer them priority in housing selection. This would reduce the number of athletes stuck in Towers or Buckley and reduce the frequency of athletes missing meals, particularly dinner, caused by distant housing.

Addington suggested the possibility of one cafeteria remaining open after hours to accomodate athletes who would normally miss their dinner.

Lack of adequate facilities during athletic competition was also brought to the subcommittee's attention. Students expressed the need for more trainers and doctors on hand during games and practices.

Soviet craft encounters comet

MOSCOW (AP)—Jubilant scientists hailed a Soviet spacecraft's encounter with Halley's comet Thursday as a space triumph and said early data indicated smooth sailing for probes that will venture even nearer next week.

The crowded control room at Moscow's Institute for Space Research erupted in applause as images of the comet arrived nine minutes after Vega 1 passed 5,270 miles from it at 10:20 a.m. (2:20 a.m. EST).

The pictures provided the closest look at a comet and were believed to be the first view of a comet's icy core.

Television monitors showed color-enhanced images of a fiery red-brown center, believed to be the nucleus, surrounded by wide bands of yellow and blue. The core is believed to be about 2½ miles in diameter.

"It's a triumph, it is truly a triumph," said Fred Whipple of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass., one of many scientists monitoring the mission. "It's the first time in history we have had this sort of imaging system this close to a comet."

Whipple hypothesized in 1950 that comets had solid cores in what became known as the "dirty snowball" theory.

When asked whether he thought the images from Vega 1 supported his theory, he replied, "I think so."

Vega 1 is the first of five probes scheduled to fly by the comet in the next eight days. Data from the missions will take months to analyze and are expected to provide an unprecendented glimpse into the origins of the universe.

Roald A. Sagdeyev, head of the Vega program, said comets "were born at the first moment of creation of our solar system, about 4.5 billion years ago...They should be preserved rather well in the space refrigerator," a reference to the extreme cold of space.

Husband charged with murder, no body found

HARTFORD (AP)—A Hartford man whose wife has been missing for five months has been charged with murder, apparently the first person in Connecticut ever arrested in a suspected homicide without a body being found.

John Pittman, 32, was arrested Wednesday morning and charged with slaying his wife, Gloria, 39. She has not been seen since Oct. 13.

Hartford police said Pittman had been a focal point of their investigation almost since the day his wife disappeared. Police refused to comment on the evidence that led to his arrest, and the warrant will remain sealed until Pittman's court appearance today.

Hartford State's Attorney John M. Bailey said his staff found no other such case in state history.

"In any other case, you begin with a body, a medical examiner's report and a cause of death," he said. "In this case, we don't have evidence of those three."

Bailey said the case likely will be built on the circumstantial evidence.

Pittman, who was being held on $100,000, was to be presented in Superior Court in Hartford today. A probable-cause hearing is expected to be scheduled within 60 days.

Pittman was arrested at Oak Hill School, where he worked in the kitchen. He had a Greyhound bus schedule in his pocket when arrested, police said.

Pittman, who married Gloria nine months before her disappearance was charged with larceny Nov. 12 for attempting to withdraw money from his missing wife's credit union account, police said. He was accompanied by a woman posing as Gloria Pittman. He also was charged with possession of hashish in that incident. The case is pending.

Death penalty urged for murder of hostages

WASHINGTON (AP)—A presidential task force recommended the death penalty for the murder of American hostages anywhere in the world on Thursday, but described U.S. policies against terrorism as generally sound and recommended no major overhaul.

The Cabinet-level task force headed by Vice President George Bush called for increased use of spies to penetrate terrorist organizations as well as strengthened extradition treaties to bring terrorists to justice.

Repeating a note that the Reagan administration has sounded in the face of bloody terrorist assaults in the Middle East, Europe and elsewhere, Bush said the group favors pinpoint strikes but opposes "wanton destruction of human life in order to show some muscle."

Immediately after taking office in the wake of the Iranian hostage crisis, President Reagan pledged that terrorists would face "swift and effective retribution." In reacting to more recent terrorist incidents, however, he has refused to use force that the said might harm innocent victims or bystanders.

"The principal conclusion of the task force is that U.S. policies and priorities are sound, well conceived and properly organized," said Adm. James Holloway, former chief of naval operations, who headed the task force working group.

Holloway said the task force endorsed the president's policy and favored "swift and effective retribution against the perpetrators, not just random retaliation against people that may involve innnocent lives."

The task force released a declassified version of its report.

Holloway said a classified version containing 44 recommendations went to the president on Dec. 20 and that he approved it in full on Jan. 20.

Gorbachev announces additions to Politburo

MOSCOW (AP)—Mikhail S. Gorbachev closed the 27th party congress Thursday with a restructuring of the Kremlin apparatus that brings Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin home from Washington and promotes the first woman into the inner circle of power in 25 years.

Gorbachev, the Communist Party's general secretary, also announced new members of the ruling Politburo, five new Central Committee secretaries, and a new Central Committee that reflects the changes in major party and economic posts since the death of Leonid Brezhnev in 1982.

The personnel changes and the program presented at the congress are designed to set a course for the Soviet Union until the end of the century and to put Gorbachev's personal stamp on the party structure.

Dobrynin, 66, has been Soviet ambassador to the United States for 25 years. He is one of 11 people, five of them new, named to the secretariat, which is in charge of day-to-day affairs in the Soviet Union.

Dobrynin's portfolio was not announced, but it is assumed he will be working in foreign policy. The Soviet Union now has two professional diplomats with extensive knowledge of the United States in the top ranks, Dobrynin and President Andrei Gromyko.

Gromyko was replaced last summer as Foreign Minister by Eduard Shevardnadze, and it is not known how much influence Gromyko has on foreign policy.

A successor to Dobrynin in Washington was not immediately announced.

While the Politburo in Washington was not immediately announced, it is concentrated in the hands of members who also hold secretariat portfolios.

WHUS to campaign for fee increase

By Carrie Janush
Campus Correspondent

The members of the WHUS fee increase committee met last Wednesday night to discuss their campaign to increase campus and community awareness. In an attempt to get its proposed fee increase of $3 per UConn student for next semester, the station is devising an all out campaign to become more recognized by the University of Connecticut's students and the Mansfield community.

The committee, composed of WHUS station members and community members, discussed how the campaign would focus on the two groups of people.

"We want to target our loyal listeners, and get them out to vote for the fee increase on April 14 and 15," Lisa Gorman, the radio station's sales manager, said. "We want to target UConn students who are neutral in their view of WHUS. We want to inform them of the opportunities open to them at WHUS. For example, we offer work study to students, intern positions, and Federal Communications Commission radio training."

Gorman said that the station would not bother to go after people who don't like WHUS, because "we just haven't got the time to win them over before the fee increase vote."

The methods of increasing awareness that were discussed include mailing out fact sheets to all residents on the UConn campus. According to Gorman, the sheets "spell out exactly why we need a fee increase." The committee also plans on promoting its educational opportunities such as FCC radio training to UConn students. Gorman said the station will also be putting up promotional posters in lecture halls and playing radio promotion spots.

The members of the committee also agreed to have a WHUS open house, which is scheduled for March 21 at 7 p.m. at the station in the Student Union. Gorman said "It is open to the public and we hope to show everyone what we're all about and why we need the increase."

Senior receives scholarship

A UConn senior has received a $300 academic scholarship from the Real Estate Educators Association (REEA).

Jon D. Gold of 197 Fishing Trail, Stamford, is one of 36 students to win the national scholarship, established in 1982 by Bruce Harword of California, a noted author of real estate texts.

Gold is a business administration major.

"The recipients of the REEA award are all outstanding students who will, I am sure, be a credit to the real estate profession. Each is very deserving of this national recognition. It is most encouraging to know the real estate field will be enriched by having these individuals joining its ranks in the near future," Harword said.

Requirements for the scholarship are full-time enrollment; completion of at least two semesters of work; a minimum grade point average of 3.2 and a demonstrated intent to pursue a career in real estate.

REEA is an international organization comprised of more than 850 professionals in all areas of real estate education. It was formed in 1980 to fecilitate communication and cooperation among all people concerned with instruction, administration, and regulation of real estate education and to raise their competence and performance to the highest possible level.

New appointees named to MBA program

Two appointments affecting the Master of Business Administration programs were announced today by Dr. Ronald J. Patten, dean of UConn's School of Business Administration.

John H. Carroll, a UConn graduate who recently practiced law in Manchester, has been appointed Director of MBA Admissions and MBA Program Director.

Dr. Norman E. Puffett of Danbury, has been named director of the school's Fairfield County MBA Programs. He will administer MBA programs at Danbury and Stamford. The Danbury program is based on the Western Connecticut State University campus.

Patten noted that since 1974, nearly 400 persons have received MBA degrees through studies in Danbury.

The Stamford program is based at UConn-Stamford.

Patten said that the UConn MBA program is nationally accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, the first multi-locational programs in the nation to be accredited in its entirety by AACSB.

Carroll, who received his business degree from UConn magna cum laude in 1978, was awarded his juris doctor degree from the University of San Diego School of Law in 1981. He was elected to Beta Gamma Sigma, the national honorary society for business administration. He also has been admitted to practice law in Connecticut, the District of Columbia and the U.S. District Court for Connecticut.

Puffett received his master's and doctorate degrees in higher and adult education from Columbia University. Before coming to UConn he served as Rockland County campus provost at Long Island University, Yorktown; New York campus dean for Mercy College and assistant to the dean at New York University. He also has taught at both Mercy and NYU.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter's popularity among University students has taken a drastic leap upward in the last month, a random poll of 200 UConn students indicates.

The students polled by the Daily Campus Sunday also overwhelmingly picked President Ford as the Republican nominee, 64 percent of the students choosing Ford as compared to 18.5 percent for former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, a noted conservative.

Carter, the apparent Democratic fron runner since his strong showing in this month's New Hampshire primary, was picked by 28 percent in similar polls conducted by the Daily Campus January 28.

5 YEARS AGO TODAY

Segments of the Board of Governor's (BOG) Winter Weekend will be shown on television at 7:30 this evening, according to the BOG president.

WFSB-TV will broadcast the Olympic events such as the Tug of War, Dizzy Lizzy, and Leap Frog on the program "PM Magazine," Amy Hafele said last night.

The Board also criticized the Daily Campus for not running corrections on articles about BOG meetings which they said were inaccurate. The Board said they will send an "Opinion to the Editor" to both the Daily Campus and the News Forum concerning the papers' coverage of BOG meetings. —J. Morton

Athletics and academics

Earl Kelley. The perils of UConn basketball. "Orangemen squeeze UConn" (back page headline of Monday's paper). Stuff like this get your attention, and the media plays on it.

And so I find it necessary to comment on a UConn sport program. A program, not the basketball one (sigh of relief?), that deserves some ink. Positive ink.

The overshadowed winter program of ice hockey is on the move, growing and winning. Let's face it, a mediocre hoop team (at best) and an academic drop-out have frustrated UConn fans.

First of all, I know it is only a Division II team, so comparing it with Big East basketball is both ludicrous and futile. I also recognize that it does already receive strong support from some of the university's best fans, so I write not to criticize but to garner more of those cold-loving crazies. Besides, Husky fans deserve something real to cheer about.

For beginners, the program is improving. Last year, in his fourth year as head coach, Ben Kirtland guided his Huskies to an eighth-place ECAC finish and the first playoff birth in the 25-year history of the program. The Huskies went 14-10 on the year and eventually bowed to the top seed in the conference, Salem State, in post-season play.

This winter, UConn posted the most wins ever by a Husky team with 16 and the highest ECAC finish as they landed in the No. 6 slot— all this while facing the toughest schedule any Husky team has ever seen (they played the most games ever with 32, they skated with five Division I schools, they participated in four in-season tournaments, and the team took a trip to Alaska to play some top-notch competition).

They also made the playoffs for the second consecutive year— something previously unthinkable for UConn hockey.

In the playoffs, with three of their top five scorers injured, the Huskies carried a makeshift lineup to Babson College, held out heroically, and lost to the No. 3 team 4-2. Call me crazy, but I don't think the hoop team would fare quite as well in a similiar situation (doesn't one player determine a season in basketball?).

But, as forementioned, I do not wish to compare basketball and hockey. The point is, the hockey team has a 'never-say-die' and winning attitude, and that's hard to come by in major sports at Storrs (my apologies coaches Morrone and Wright).

Furthermore, the graduation rate of hockey seniors since Kirtland has taken over the coaching duties is, except for one player three years ago who didn't fulfill a language requirement, 100 percent. If nothing else, a coach should graduate his players. And Kirtland does.

In his five years as Husky head coach, Kirtland has improved the hockey program immensely. He has developed an alumni support network, instituted a year-round training program, increased the quality of the UConn schedule yearly, and has taken the Huskies to post-season play in consecutive seasons.

Pretty good program development, despite an open rink and minimal athletic funds.

The hockey program is a successful and expanding one. Who knows, with a little university backing, it could blossom into a 'major' UConn sport.

The next issue of the Daily Campus will be published Tuesday, March 18.

Laureate lauded at home

FAIRFIELD (AP)—There are no books of Robert Penn Warren's poetry remaining on the shelves at Fairfield's public library, but there has been no rush on the writer's books at a downtown bookstore.

"I can't say poetry is a great seller here," said Elizabeth Griffin, who owns the Fairfield Open Bookshop where Warren—a Fairfield resident who last week was named the nation's first poet laureate—has a charge account.

"But (poetry) doesn't sell well anywhere," she said.

In the window of Griffin's store this week hung a poster reading "Congratulations Robert Penn Warren, Fairfield's poet laureate." And while many Fairfield residents interviewed recently by The Advocate of Stamford spoke proudly of Warren, many had read barely a line of his work.

"I must say I was thrilled to see his face on the front page of the paper," said Ina Goldstein, a librarian in Fairfield who said she read one of Warren's novels "years and years ago."

Just inside the door of the Fairfield Open Bookshop, Griffin had displayed the works of local authors on a small bookcase. Above the books hung a copy of a newspaper article announcing Warren's nomination. No one, however, had yet been drawn to buy one of Warren's books, Griffin said.

She said Warren once asked her to order some of his books of poetry but she found them out of print. "He said once that the state probably made more money on sales tax from selling bibles than from poetry," she said.

Seated at a table in the library, Michael Anastasiou, a 24-year-old engineering student, and Charles Johnson, a 25-year-old accounting student, said they had never heard of Warren.

"To read poetry takes a lot of time," said Johnson. "And time is something we don't have a lot of."

Ted Ostrowski, 35, a fifth-grade teacher at Fairfield's Roger Sherman School, said he remembered reading one of Warren's novels years ago, but he said poetry was not his favorite literary form.

"There's some poetry I just don't like," he said as he visited a T-shirt store up the street from the bookstore.

Signs of spring along the road

By J.E. Harris
Campus Correspondent

What are the signs of spring? You're driving along I-95 and the heater's broken and your knuckles are white. There's ice on the windshield and snow on the side of the road. Where are those signs of spring? Do you see 'Spring Break Ahead'? Yes. But before that, and before 'Robin Crossing,' there's something that catches your eye that proves spring can't be far up the freeway.

It's the billboard of the first photos out of Florida of baseball players doing leg lifts. It's photos of drills and workouts. It's the bits of news from down South. It's hearing about this year's veteran trying to hang on who arrived early to camp with the anxious rookies. It's Steinbrenner's complaints being talked about on your car radio, again. It's the Red Sox management coming across the airwaves promising a great pitching staff this year. You're getting excited because you hear about a kid wonder from Kryton or somewhere who they say will bring your team a pennant this season.

There are signs popping up everywhere now on the highway. Sore arm exit 71. Food, phone, lodging and strained muscles up ahead. Calisthenics area next stop. Exhibition games one week down the road.

Turn up the radio and there's more. Arbitration hearings, words from the commissioner and salary hold outs. Is that the sun you see? Are those leaves on the trees?

'He's going to be a key player on this team.'

'I feel very confident about the season, there's a great attitude here.'

High predictions, good attitudes and optimism are everywhere. The players are looking the best they have in their careers. What you hear every March, but it sounds so familiar and you believe it. Why not? It looks like that snow is melting.

Twilight comes and you're smiling as you drive along. Then you see it as it comes right out of the sky. It looms large in front of you in bright blinking lights. The sign says, 'You are now entering Spring Training.' The green highway sign above reads, 'Baseball Season exit 86, one month away. You've almost made it, Spring's only five exits away. You know it's coming because you've seen the signs.

Superlearning is super study aid

By Cynthia Bouley
Campus Correspondent

Superlearning is a technique that involves using the brain in different ways in order to retain information better. And, superlearning can be very useful for studying, according to an academic counselor here.

Brinda Van, the facilitator of a superlearning seminar offered by the Department of Counseling Services gives students many tips in her program on how to study effectively.

Van said that if a student gets nervous and goes blank during an exam, he should close his eyes and imagine a bright light in the center of the forehead for a few seconds. This relaxes the body and gets the mind stimulated.

She also pointed out that people are either visual, auditory, or tactile learners. Visual learners are those that use maps, graphs, and other visual material in order to learn. Auditory learners are those that review their notes verbally when studying, and tactile learners are those that write things over and over in order to learn them. By knowing what type of learner you are, you can develop effective study skills.

The subjects of either science, mathematics, and language will be best learned if studied right before going to bed, according to Van.

Relaxation is very important when studying. A relaxed studying atmosphere can be obtained by listening to baroque music playing softly in the background. Students should study for 25-40 minutes at a time; this is most everyone's attention span. After this amount of time, a break is necessary to restore attentiveness. This should be done until the studying goal is reached.

In addition to the superlearning seminar, the Department of Counseling Services offers other programs throughout the year. For further information call 486-4130.

Baseball team heads to Dixie

Huskies to open season with tough road trip

By Paul Orzulak
Daily Campus Staff

Like many other UConn students, the men's baseball team will be heading south for spring break.

But unlike those students heading south to worhip the sun god, the only tans the Huskies are likely to come back with will stretch from their elbows down to their wrists. For the men are going south to do what they do best: to play baseball.

The annual southern trip marks the beginning of the 1986 season and the challenge of their always-tough DivisionI 45-game schedule. The men will be in North Carolina throughout next week, playing eight games against some of the best teams the country has to offer.

Of the five teams the Huskies face in those seven days, four of them have been listed among the top 45 teams in the nation by Collegiate Baseball magazine in its pre-season poll. In addition, each of the teams has had the advantage of playing in a warmer climate and have already played in excess of eight games each, while the Huskies have not been outside very much due to weather.

"We're at a disadvantage going south, there's no doubt about that," said senior co-captain Mark Thalmann. "But everybody's looking forward to going down there and we're ready to win this year."

Winning should be made easier this year for the Huskies as all but one of their starters from a year ago return. Not only are the Huskies returning 15 lettermen from last year's Big East Northern Division championship team, but 10 of those returning 15 are seniors, the most ever at any one time on a UConn baseball squad.

"We have a very mature team, and everybody is hungry to win," Thalmann said. "All 10 of our seniors will play a vital role on the team this year."

Veteran performers will start at every position except shortstop, and of the eight potential pitchers, only two have no prior varsity experience.

Thalmann will lead the Husky pitching staff this year as he faces Davidson College in their first outing Sunday afternoon. A righthanded four-year letterman, Thalmann went 2-1 in Big East action last year with a respectable 2.22 ERA.

"I hope to be consistently good pitching this year," Thalmann said. "By that I mean that I don't want to get knocked out in the third inning of one game and then go on to pitch a shutout in the next."

The Huskies are looking for consistency from sophomore John Shea as well. A basketball player as well as an outstanding pitcher, this southpaw won five of his first six starts last year en route to a 6-4 season record as well as a 3.96 ERA as he led all pitchers with 61.2 innings pitched.

"John Shea will be a factor this year," head coach Andy Baylock said. "He had a very good fall (fall baseball) and he really worked on his mechanics."

Rounding out the veteran pitching staff will be seniors Mike Mancini, Scott Ryan and Bob Emery. Junior Dave Lanese will see short relief work as well as playing first base for the returning staff that accounted for 73.5 percent of the innings pitched last year.

Expected to hurl a few innings this year are newcomer Stew Strong, lefty freshman Tom Eccles, sophomore Mike Malley, and junior Jack Hurley.

None of the pitchers are expected to go more than five or six innings in North Carolna next week. Thalmann is scheduled to start the first game, while Emery should be on the mound against Davidson Monday. Either Shea or Strong should hurl next while Ryan rounds out the rotation.

The pitching rotation will be supported by a strong veteran defense, anchored by senior catcher Jim Sarantides. Sarantides hit .282 with two home runs as well as finishing with a .417 on-base percentage last year. A winter diet has shed 20 pounds off Sarantides, which has made him quicker and stronger.

Also seeing action behind the plate will be sophomores Lee Luiso and Rich Gorry.

While the catching should be steady this year, the infield will be strong. Junior Dave Lanese will see the majority of the action at first base, while designated hitter Jerry Lapenta should share time as well. A 1985 All Big East designated hitter selection, Lapenta should provide plenty of power this year based on his .296 average combined with his 11 home runs and outstanding .616 slugging percentage of a year ago.

Senior Al Franceschini, an All-New England selection two years ago, returns for his third year at second base. An outstanding fielder as well as a steady hitter, Franceschini hit .270 last year including 10 doubles as well as fielding at a .956 clip.

Friday Digest

Softball opens Sunday

The UConn women's softball team, under the direction of third-year head coach Karen Mullins, will kick off the 1986 spring season with an eight-game swing through North Carolina this weekend. The Huskies will open their spring slate on Sunday, March 9 with a 2:00 p.m. doubleheader at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C.

The reaminder of the Huskies' southern trip is as follows: Mon., March 10, at East Carolina, 1:00 p.m.; Tues., March 11, at North Carolina-Wilmington, 2:00 p.m.; and Thur., March 13, at Virginia Commonwealth, 11:00 a.m. All dates will be seven-inning doubleheaders.

Mullins' squad is coming off its most successful season ever. In her second year as UConn head coach, Mullins' 1985 team compiled a 34-7 record, were crowned ECAC Division I champions, and attained the No. 1 ranking in New England and the No. 2 NCAA Northeast Region ranking in the final year-end polls, just missing aberth to the NCAA national tournament. In addition, the Huskies broke into the National Top 20 for the first time in the program's history, earning the No. 19 national ranking mid-way through the year.

In her two years as coach Mullins, a 1979 UConn graduate, has guided the Huskies to a 56-9 record for an impressive 86.2 winning percentage.

Leading the UConn squad into its southern trip are senior co-captains Cherie Anderson and Mary Linhares. Anderson, a two time All-New England righthander has been the Huskies' main stopper the last three seasons. The holder of seven UConn career and two UConn single season pitching marks, Anderson has compiled a 30-9 record including an 11-3 mark with a 0.71 ERA last year.

Linhares, a 1985 All-New England First Team selection as pitcher/DH, is also entering her fourth season as a Husky starter. Last spring, the righthander was 9-1 with a superb 0.19 ERA while batting .276 with 13 RBI.

Gymnastics must wait

By Kristen Kelleher
Daily Campus Staff

The gymnastics team must sit and wait to hear if it has earned the right to travel to the University of New Hampshire for the ECAC championships on March 15. Five teams will be named to the tournament on Sunday March 9 representing the top third of the division.

Historically, UNH has been a powerhouse at the ECACs, winning the tournament three years in a row. UConn was runner-up two years ago and third last year.

The first few weeks of the Huskies' season were not encouraging. Pre-season health reports showed that the top performers of last year, Carol McDonough and Robin Zak were questionable to participate in the opening meets. McDonough had a broken hand which eventually healed in time for the opening of the season, but she reinjured it in practice a few weeks later, causing her to miss the rest of the season. Zak's ankle, which had been broken in three places, healed sufficiently by the fifth meet to enable her to capture second place in the floor exercise that day.

With the early injuries to the veteran members, the freshmen had to take more responsibility immediately. Enter Tina Sawyer who improved every meet to hold this season's all-around record of 35.60 points. Freshman Lynne Heffernan broke the all-time school vault record by earning a 9.10 last weekend at the University of Pennsylvania.

After losing three straight to begin the year, UConn rattled off nine wins in the next 11 meets. They now stand poised with a 9-5 record, awaiting word on whether they will go to New Hampshire to compete in the ECAC's. Individual members of the team can also qualify to go to the tournament if their all-around scored are high enough.

Even if the Huskies fail to qualify, they will have a chance to avenge their two ECAC losses of the last two years to UNH when UNH comes to UConn for a meet on Saturday, March 22.

Finally, on April 4, the NCAA Regional Championships will take place.
